Asad Meah. You can be anything you want to be, you can, but why is it then that many people end up being nothing but average. It seems as though people do not reflect and act upon that point but just keep on persisting on the path that they don't want to live in, but they just continue to do the same things day after day because that is all they know.

When you can't be bothered to do anything, you might feel like the apathy will last forever. But hopefully it's just a temporary thing. Sometimes you know that doing nothing is just what you need to get going again at a later stage, but when you can't put your finger on why you can't be bothered to do anything, all you can then be arsed to do, is work out the reasons.

The trouble with telling an impressionable young soul that someday they “ can be anything ” in the way that books and movies and teachers and parents like to do in our modern society is simple: if you tell a lie enough times it starts to feel like a truth. And this is very dangerous. For a young child, the warm and fuzzy approach works.

Like most girls and boys, Zoe enthusiastically embraces the wonders of our world and its infinite possibilities. "I can be anything I want to be!" she tells us, presenting herself in a range of careers. "But what if you fail?" asks a voice of doubt that attempts to undermine her confidence. Bold and sassy, Zoe swats the voice away at every turn, declaring her certainty with a charisma that will encourage us all to silence the fears projected onto us by our world. Why can't a girl grow up to be President? Zoe can! When the voice of doubt continues, Zoe knows exactly what to say: "Go away, voice... I can be anything... but first, I have to learn to read. And don't tell me I can't!" Award-winner Diane Dillon has created a winning character who defies anything to hold her back from achieving her goals. And the key to Zoe's future success begins when Zoe defiantly opens her book, making it clear that both confidence and reading are tools we all need to make our dreams come true.

In her third book, Sometimes I Can Be Anything, Karen Gallas explores young children's experience and understanding of gender, race, and power as revealed by the interactions within her first and second grade classroom. Presenting classroom research conducted over a four-year period, this experienced teacher-researcher focuses on the ways in which children collectively develop their social world. To bring that world to life, the author presents the voices and actions of specific children. The reader will meet the "bad boys," Tony and Tom; Josie, a "tom boy"; "beautiful" Dierdre; Latia and Alexis, "proud and taking no risks"; and Rachel, a "silent girl." Because Gallas watches the same children for several years, she uncovers classroom dynamics that remain obscure in most studies of teaching and learning. For example, she has seen the effects of physical beauty on a child's behaviour, has noted how some children play with the idea of being the other sex, and has tracked the alliances of silent girls. This provocative book will enable the reader to look again with new eyes at his or her own classroom.

It can be stressful being a kid today. This interactive book invites children to colour, think, write and draw and let out their emotions that sometimes they don't want to bother their parents with. This encourages them to talk to their parents and express their emotions in healthy ways that help them to become healthy and balanced adults. It is all about what a person believes is POSSIBLE for them - It's NOT about where they have come from. It's where they are going! They are the future! It can be difficult for kids today. The modern world evolves at a faster pace every year. We WANT the very best for our kids, yet sometimes we don't realise what pressure society puts on them. They often hold in stress and anxiety, often not wanting to worry their parents, and we wrongly assume they are without stress at early ages. Scientific breakthroughs now show kids experience many 'adult' emotions from an early age. They often don't want to worry their parents so hold it all inside. As they grow and learn, their active minds act like sponges absorbing all information that comes their way. Often it is a source of amusement as they repeat pretty much everything they hear. This is part of their brain's development and helps in learning and retaining information. Often what we don't realise is that some of what is being learned and copied is damaging to their self worth and individual identity. It is SO important for these beautiful bright young souls to be able to express themselves fully. A study by leading British psychologists, has proven that many boys between the ages of 4 to 10 can only express anger, leading to aggressive behaviour, in later life. From early ages this is often expressed in war games, which are often encouraged. They are not, often, encouraged to release their fears and stresses by talking or writing down their feelings in a journal. Allowing them to talk about how they feel on a daily basis, helps release unhappiness and stress, allowing them time to grow, play, learn and be the best they can be, to become healthy and balanced adults. Many girls have been found to put excessive importance on looks over emotions in this age of the selfie. They too need a release for all that stress and anxiety. This book is aimed at children between 5 and 10 years old, to get them to interact, write, play, colour in, think and most importantly of all RELEASE all that is troubling them. It IS valuable time away from the mobile/cell phone, iPad, laptop, computer or latest gadget. Please buy this little book for them to interact with. It has been made with love for all the Worlds' children who ARE the future of our WORLD!
