The major demand for aquarium fishes for hobbyists and public aquaria comes from the United States and western Europe, although the Asian market is rapidly expanding. Keeping ornamental fishes is one of the most popular hobbies in North America and 4–10% of fishes traded are marine (Biffar, 1997; Chapman and Fitz-Coy, 1997). Europe has about 80 public aquaria with at least 5 new major aquaria under construction, and 10–20 more in the planning stage.
