There is something beautiful about African languages carrying science, fictionalised of course, into imagined futures.

Essential reading for all armchair detectives, this collection of 33 classic whodunits is the cream of crime writing.

When beautiful young socialite Scarlett Liddell apparently commits suicide during a 'Murder Mystery Weekend', expensively staged at a Lakeland castle, the coroner calls in DI Skelgill and his team to tie up the legal loose ends. Post mortem results, however, cast doubt upon the provisional verdict - and circumstantial evidence begins to point to one obvious suspect - Will Liddell, the woman's multi-millionaire entrepreneur husband. When Will Liddell is separately accused of an unrelated offence, it seems the noose is tightening around his neck - but the more Skelgill delves beneath the surface of the exclusive circle in which the wealthy couple have moved, the more he realises there may be complex motives afoot. In this psychological drama - set amidst an echelon of society beyond his regular comfort zone - Skelgill cannot so easily rely upon his roughshewn intuition to guide him. To expose the truth, he must unpick a tangle that might almost be the plot for a murder mystery weekend itself.

To catch a killer, send a monster. There's a realm. Wreathed in ice and snow, drowning in the dark, Assevan needs a different kind of hero. There's a god. Merciless and cold, and quick to anger, the Lord of the Dead insists upon one thing only: vengeance for a murdered soul. And there's a man. A ruthless killer, Konrad is detective, judge and executioner in one. Dauntless, relentless, monstrous, he stands alone against the dark. Meet the Malykant. Justice will be served. Four cases. Four killers. Four executions. Dark fantasy and murder mystery collide in this first collection of the Malykant Mysteries.

BY THE TIME Detective Inspector Skelgill becomes the tenth person to be stranded on secluded Grisholm ('Pigs' Isle' in Old Norse) where a writers' retreat is taking place, one of the assembled literati is already dead. Though natural causes seem to provide the explanation, a second apparently accidental death and a series of inexplicable experiences convince Skelgill that a cold and calculating killer is at large. Set around Derwentwater in the English Lake District, this traditional whodunit sees Skelgill and his team striving to fathom a mystery that his superior officer suspects may be no more than his imagination at play.

? Praise for Caro Ramsay: " Well-drawn characters and great sense of place set this series head and shoulders above most of the competition " -The Times 'Among the year's best literary thrillers' -Washington Post ' Ramsay handles her characters with aplomb, the dialogue crackles and the search for the killer has surprising twists and turns'-Observer

A witty philosophical murder mystery with a charming twist: the crack detectives are sheep determined to discover who killed their beloved shepherd. On a hillside near the cozy Irish village of Glennkill, a flock of sheep gathers around their shepherd, George, whose body lies pinned to the ground with a spade. George has cared devotedly for the flock, even reading them books every night. Led by Miss Maple, the smartest sheep in Glennkill (and possibly the world), they set out to find George 's killer. The A-team of investigators includes Othello, the " bad-boy " black ram; Mopple the Whale, a Merino who eats a lot and remembers everything; and Zora, a pensive black-faced ewe with a weakness for abysses. Joined by other members of the richly talented flock, they engage in nightlong discussions about the crime, wild metaphysical speculations, and embark on reconnaissance missions into the village, where they encounter some likely suspects. Along the way, the sheep confront their own all-too-human struggles with guilt, misdeeds, and unrequited love. Funny, fresh, and endearing, it introduces a wonderful new breed of detectives to Canadian readers.
